For thousands of years in France, people ate food from their backyard and drank wine from their neighbors. Over time the food grew to crave the wine and vice versa. This relationship elevated the French dining experience into what it is today. At Le Bouchon, we like to eat our Burgundian food with Burgundian wine. Below are a few of our current favorites that are intended to pair perfectly with your meal. Bon Appétit!

2017 Domaine les Capréoles Beaujolais Rosé $52
We are taking some creative liberty calling this porchpounder rose "Beaujolais Rose". Made from 100% Gamay, this fresh and fruity rosé has a little bit of residual sugar that rounds out the wine but unfortunately precludes it from technically being called "Beaujolais Rose", but we don't care, it tastes like summer and we like that.

2016 Domaine Gilles Noblet Pouilly-Fuisse $60
Some of you may have noticed that we have been pouring a cuvée of Macon-Fuisse specifically picked for Le Bouchon and our sister restaurant La Sardine, but you may not have noticed the "Grand Vin" from this producer hiding in plain sight. This Chardonnay is round and rich yet still pure and not overly oaked like many California Chardonnays. Try this versatile white with anything from Mussels to Chicken.

2012 Domaine Digioa-Royer Hauts-Cotes de Nuits Villages $58
Whoever said Pinot Noir is too delicate to pair with red meat has not tasted this burly, dark fruited wine from just up the hill of Nuits-Saint-Georges. After 5 years of bottle ageing, this wine is starting to come around, but it will benefit from being opened as soon as possible, so order this bottle, let it breath and have a glass of bubbly while you wait.

2016 Domaine Gérard Seguin Fixin $90
Are you fixin' for bottle of wine? Try this Pinot Noir that drinks like a baby Gevrey-Chambertin. Powerfully aromatic, with ripe, opulent fruit and a super-silky finish, this wine is just delicious.
